

Jeremy Letwin

Areas of Specialisation

Human rights law and theory, normative ethics, analytical jurisprudence

Education

2017-Present: PhD in Philosophy of Human Rights Law
King's College London
Thesis: Utilitarianism and Human Rights Law
Supervisors: John Tasioulas and Guglielmo Verdirame

2016 – 2017: LLM – Distinction
University College London
Specialisation: Jurisprudence and Legal Theory

2012 – 2015: LLB – First Class
King's College London
Prizes: Routledge Prize for Law and Social Theory
Bindman Prize for Anti-Discrimination law

2011: A levels
Subjects: Politics (A) Theology (A*) History (A)*

Employment

2015-Present: Tutoring for Bloomsbury Law Tutors

I tutor around 8 hours a week of jurisprudence, public law, and human rights to undergraduates. Whether or not I get any work depends on building a good relationship with my clients, providing a competent service, and creating a good reputation. Over the last two years I have built a substantial practice, teaching up to 20 hours a week during the exam period.

2017 – 2018: Tutoring for Carfax Tutors

I taught Philosophy A level students an interesting syllabus involving moral philosophy and epistemology.

2013 – 2014: Tutoring for Holland Park Tutors

I tutored History, Politics, and Religious Studies, and dealt with a challenging student who had been excluded from school.

2011: Bicycle Courier at 'City Sprint'

This was physically demanding work which required me to cycle more than 50 miles per day. The job also gave me a chance to see Central London in an entirely new way, working in the oldest and most beautiful parts of the city.

Volunteering

2016: Immigration Tribunal Friends

I spent a day at the Immigration Appeals Tribunal helping litigants in person to organise their papers, and taking notes during the trial in case a record of proceedings was required for further appeals.

2013: Volunteering for Action Tutoring

I provided one-on-one tuition to the brightest children on free school meals from under-achieving schools.

Conferences

2018: Presenting at Warwick Political and Legal Theory Conference

I presented a paper analysing the moral foundations of ECHR, and specifically qualified rights and the doctrine of proportionality.

2018: Convenor of the International Graduate Legal Research Conference

Along with three co-convenors I organised the 2018 edition of the conference. We secured high profile speakers and presenters from all over the globe.