AADHum/ARHU Summer Research Initiative. Big Ten Academic Alliance Summer Research Opportunity Program
    University of Maryland–College Park, MD (Summer 2020)
    Student researchers examined methods to humanize and memorialize those who were and continue to be subjected to racialized violence. Research findings were archived as a collection of four deliverables: a How We Work document, mockup designs for six digital humanities tools [Google Maps, Leaflet, Palladio, Scalar, ArcGis StoryMaps, and Tableau Public], an interview between researchers, and a final report.

Howard University Mellon Mays Undergraduate Fellowship Digital Humanities Summer Institute
    Howard University–Washington, D.C. (Summer 2019)
    Fellows were educated on and mastered the fundamentals of text mining, data analysis, data visualizations, and the configuration of digital assets through services including query, search, and processing. Fellows were required to produce a project proposal and create interactive visuals from datasets using Tableau Public. The project analyzed course syllabi from social and political philosophy courses from four universities between the academic years of 2015-2018 to emphasize a lack of diversity in philosophy courses and readings.
