Biography

H. Cumaili is an independent researcher focusing on the reception history of biblical prophecy, particularly the post-exilic prophetic corpus (Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi) and the Johannine Paraclete traditions.

His approach follows a simple methodological principle: let the text speak first. By returning to the textual horizon of the sources, his work explores how prophetic expectation developed into later interpretive traditions in early Christianity and how biblical texts were reread across historical contexts.
