AREAS OF SPECIALIZATION

✦ NORMATIVE ETHICS: teleology; deontology; maximalism; partiality and impartiality; consequentialism; consequentializing; supererogation; moral worth; Kantian ethics; Rossian pluralism; aggregation; virtuous motivation; moral praiseworthiness; special obligations (i.e., associative duties); agent-centered options; agent-centered constraints/restrictions; the paradox of deontology; the paradox of supererogation; the duty of beneficence; moral dilemmas; the self-other asymmetry; normative guidance, normative indeterminacy, the agent-relative/agent-neutral distinction; actualism versus possibilism; the problem of overdetermination; the puzzle of plural obligation; the principle of moral harmony; perfect and imperfect duties; using as a mere means; obligatory final ends; respect for a person's dignity and humanity, moral vagueness and/or indeterminacy; the distinction between moral and non-moral reasons; making a difference and the problem of causal impotency; what ultimately matters and what our ultimate moral concerns should be; and whether a theory is individually or collectively self-defeating.

✦ REASONS AND RATIONALITY: weighing reasons; pattern-based reasons; reasons-responsiveness; transmission of reasons; reasons to be moral; underdetermination by reasons; what we just plain ought to do (all things considered); the different types of strength a reason can have (enticing, requiring, and justifying); reasons and obligations with respect to attitudes and their relationship to reasons and obligations with respect to actions; the self-torturer puzzle; the wrong-kind-of-reasons problem; the basic belief; time and rationality; the relationship between reasons with respect to more and less specific options; and whether 'reason' implies 'can'.

✦ ACTION, AGENCY, AND RESPONSIBILITY: blame; accountability; action theory; moral luck; mental agency; diachronic agency; planning agency; deserved guilt, moral responsibility; accounts of blame; collective action problems; the paradox of forgiveness; the connection between blame and basic desert; the connection between moral requirements and blameworthiness; the connection between control and moral responsibility; reasons-responsiveness; rational capacities; the reasons-responsive picture of agency and responsibility; the toxin puzzle; rational control versus volitional and voluntary control; and obligations and responsibilities with respect to reasons-responsive attitudes (e.g., beliefs, desires, and intentions).

✦ METAETHICS: intuitionism; non-naturalism; moral realism; moral rationalism; phenomenal conservatism; reflective equilibrium; dogmatism about intuitive justification; internalism versus externalism; normative uncertainty and ignorance; normative indeterminacy; the putative overridingness of morality; 'ought' implies 'can'; the relationship between morality and self-interest; and informal deontic logic (e.g., the inheritance principle, Ross's paradox, Professor Procrastinate, the paradox of gentle murder, the problem of act versions, etc.).

✦ VALUE THEORY: final value; intrinsic value; value pluralism; the concept of wellbeing; theories of wellbeing; the principle of organic unities; the wrong-kind-of-reasons problem; the value of achievement; the shape-of-a-life phenomenon; and the buckpassing (fitting-attitudes) account of value.

✦ APPLIED ETHICS: effective altruism; population ethics; ethical consumerism; sexism, racism, and speciesism; problems involving collective harm; collective action and the inefficacy problem (e.g., voting, eating meat, and climate change); the duty to rescue, obligations to distant strangers; obligations to future generations (e.g., total principle, non-identity problem, mere addition paradox, repugnant conclusion); and the ethics of eating meat.

✦ MORAL PSYCHOLOGY: moral motivation; the nature of (and differences between) guilt, shame, and other reactive attitudes; the temporality of emotions; the moral and epistemic value of emotions; and the fittingness, rationality, and appropriateness of emotions and of emotional change (e.g., the diminution of guilt, grief, and anger over time).

✦ METAPHYSICS OF DEATH: posthumous harm; the badness of death; and the alleged asymmetry between pre-vital and postmortem nonexistence.

AREAS OF COMPETENCE

✦ Bioethics, Metaphilosophy, Kantian Ethics, Introductory Symbolic Logic, History of Early Modern Philosophy, and History of Modern British Moral Philosophy.
